We don't have anything on file with signatures. Is it safe to assume the decision to accept was made in an Exec Committee mtg?

This may have been what was formally signed – I remember going back and asking her to add the deadlines.

Apologies, forgot to include proposal in my last email. Here's the Dropbox link:

I do think it's poor form to do that, Bob. Curious what the others think.

I have no recollection of that happening. Is it extremely bad form to execute a contract now with an earlier date? Not the best option but should work...unless we're deposed because Tara does something nefarious.

All,

Per the CA Public Records Act, we've been asked to disclose our contract with Tara. The only record we have on file is her proposal, attached. We do not have a final signed contract. We looked through meeting mins to see if we could track down a board vote to approve the proposal, but were unsuccessful. Do you recall if this decision was made by the executive committee?
